

“Suit Up and Stand in the Gap” is a MUST read!! This book was created for women who want to fight for their marriage and family. Standing in the gap for someone is serious business and this short read will not only equip you, but encourage you as well. Some of my life experiences are laid out in this book because I am just like the next woman trying to protect her loved ones through the spiritual weapons that Christ Jesus made available to us. At the end of every chapter is a prayer that will see you through some challenging times. So, if you have entered eternal union with your spouse unevenly yoked, as I did, then this book is for you! Ladies, it is time to “Suit up and stand in the gap” for your loved ones!

Author Shatera Martz was born and raised in Dover, DE and now resides in Magnolia, DE with her husband Chris and their five children: Tash, Auggy, DeAngelo, Tati, and Kyra. She is a woman who is not afraid to use her faith to allow God to guide her direction in her life. She will be graduating from Grand Canyon University at the end of 2022 with a Bachelor's degree in Behavioral Health and Science.

Shatera is passionate about children and families, her ability to help families comes naturally, so she knows without a doubt this is her purpose. She previously volunteered at her church in the Children's church and has also worked with children for over 5 years in preschool settings. Her family is also incredibly unique which is another driving factor for her passion to help children and families. She recently launched an online blog called the Waiting Room to encourage women by using her faith and own personal experiences.
